Farmville: This is yet another example of a game that doesn't really offer any value at all but still manages to make a ton of money. It's a very bizarre concept which involves fun because you think you're going to become rich by buying fake farm products and selling them or you can become popular by posting pictures of your fake farm products and getting attention from people who want similar things. I mean, if this is what people want then it's really no different than Roblox except with Farmville you're dealing with real money.

Looking back at my own experience with Minecraft, it's so easy to see why people were so obsessed with it. The game was all about survival. It was about building a new life out of nothing. Things that would make you successful weren't free; they required you to work hard for them. But they were worth the wait, because it would mean you'd gather more items over time, and then you could make your house bigger or better fortified. The game was about connecting with your friends, and making sure that they were safe and able to live their own lives in the Minecraft world as well.

The company itself has not ever made such uses of VR technology but have given their developers access to the SDK in order to promote VR technology. However, ROBLOX has been criticized due to their unusual (less than the minimum) end user license agreement. Roblox has released a new version of its app called Ava (ROBLOX's Mobile Application). See above section for more details.

ROBLOX's Terms of Service has many loopholes which allows users to get away with nearly anything, such as selling products that have been stolen from other users or using bots for their own gain. The system is also very inconsistent in how it deals with complaints and bans. eventually lifted, and the account became widely regarded as a joke.[11]
